UNDP | GEF DANUBE REGIONAL PROJECT
Final Seminar · 21-22 February 2007
Bucharest, Romania

INTRODUCTION

The UNDP/GEF Danube Regional Project (DRP) and its many sub-projects (approximately 80) have produced numerous outputs since its launch. These include, for example, new: reports with new data, information and recommendations; tools; partnerships; materials for media and general public consumption; demonstration sites; and workshops. DRP considers these outputs to be of value for a diverse range of audiences, stakeholders and beneficiaries.

In response, the DRP launched a new approach for communicating its project and sub-project outputs. Within this document, you will find that outputs are organized around a set of themes that best reflect the DRP's main overall areas of project activity, including:

1. River Basin Management
2. Agriculture and Diffuse Pollution
3. Industry and Municipal Activities
 - a Municipal Water Supply and Wastewater
 - b Detergents and Phosphates
4. Wetlands
5. Public Participation

Each theme includes a number of Project Information Sheets.

Each theme begins with a Project Information Sheet entitled Products and Activities which provides short explanations about:

- Why the DRP is involved with that theme
- Who can benefit from the products and activities related to that theme
- All of the products and activities developed through the DRP that are related to that theme

Products and activities range from reports to demonstration sites to media outreach and websites.

A number of additional Information Sheets then follow which focus on and describe specific products and activities.

Finally, a number of stories are also included to illustrate the work of the DRP and that of organizations and NGOs that are supported by the DRP, in a colourful and interesting manner – because that's what the Danube River Basin truly is – colourful and interesting.
